A wonder of waving half in the rare brown curl
To the guise of the delicate month,
Ewest with the beauty of race and pearl,
And warm with the soul of the South,

And I bow to the proud suggestion Of the grand and regal air,

Perplexest, I pause in my dresming,
To number the loss and gain,
And wonder if Love repays ms
For Love's nelicious pain;
And I you's to the stars that the joy be mine
To kindle her cheek's soft flush,
And I ask of the stars if her teys aver shine,
Love-dim, is the evening's hush,

Peace, then, unresting spirit!

Do the fivers that make up to beaven,
Ever covet the pale moon's love!
Shown to me to le in the gleam
Of the passe mate mixingst skins,
To tenderly mose us hopeless dream
Of the light of remembered eyes.

CULTURE OF HEMP—The Plant in Min-ota.—The St. Paul (Minnesota) Democrat noticed, during a hasty trip through sev-l counties in that State, a number of fine patches of hemp (cannabis sativa), the culture of which several farmers of our acquaintance have undertaken. In Kentucky, especially, hemp is one of the staple products of the soil, and is extensively cultivated on account of the important uses of its seed, from which a very valuable oil is obtained, and the fibers of its bark. The supply of this material in this country is yet far short of the demand, and it still forms a large article of import from foreign countries, especially from Russia. That Minnesota is admirably adapted to the growth and cultivation of hemp, has already, in several instances, been fairly tested and established; and we write this brief notice for the purpose of attracting the attention of our agriculturalists to the matter. In a more extended article, at another time, we may allude to this again and urge many reasons why the cultivation of hemp should attract why the cultivation of hemp should attract from farmers careful consideration.

from farmers careful consideration.

The hemp we have seen to grow with a luxuriance in this State which we have never witnessed elsewhere, and it has already become naturalized along the wilds of the Red River of the North. As a winter employment the breaking of hemp, and preparation of the fiber for market would afford profitable employment to hundreds of persons, who otherwise would find little to do. It is a question open for discussion as to the best means for rotting bemp in this climate; as it means for rotting hemp in this climate; as it is well known a damp, moist atmosphere is preferable for that purpose. Still, any difficulty of this kind could be easily overcome, especially as Minnesota does not lack in an abundance of water. J. W. McClung, Esq., of this city, has six acres of hemp under cultivation on his farm, which he planted for the seed, and, we presume, will have more than sufficient for his own use. By all means, let our agriculturalists incorporate hemp as let our agriculturalists incorporate hemp as one of the staple products of Minnesota.

THE GOOD POINTS OF COWS .- The quality of milk a cow will give, is indicated by hair and skin, and yellow color of the skin in-side of the ears and other parts not thickly side of the ears and other parts not thickly covered with hair. I have never known a cow with soft, fur-like hair and mellow skin, appearing gummy at the roots of the hair when parted with the hands, that was not a good butter cow, and when fattened, would mix tallow well with flesh. Having been accustomed to fatten my cows, that failed for causes of known results. I have observed that those known to give good milk, made more thrift in tallow when fed to fatten. Hence the conclusion, that cows that handle well in what the butchers call joints, may be judged by a plainly-marked design of nature in her physical structure. Instead of heavy head, horns, neck and shoulders, and comparatively light hind-quarters, which is characteristic of the opposite sex, she should show an opposite design, by a feminine countenance, light head, neck and shoulders widening backward from her chest to the loin and hind quarters, where the most strength is required.

A HUGE SNORER,-Old Bicks was an awful anorer. He could be heard further than a blacksmith's forge; but his wife became so accustomed to it that it soothed her to repose. They were a very domestic couple never alept apart for many years. At length the old man was required to attend court at some distance. The first night after, his wife never slept a wink; she missed the snoring accompaniment. The next night passed away in the same manner, without sleep. She was getting into a very bad way, and probably would have died, had it not been for the ingenuity of a servant girl, who perceived the difficulty. She took the coffeemill into her mistress's chamber, and ground her to sleep at once.
